Let's Start!

Let's describe the new employee!

Learning Outcome

Accurately use important information about people's jobs and places of work in communicative situations.

Ask your partner:

- Do you usually agree or disagree with your classmates or colleagues? Why?
- When you disagree with a colleague, how do you handle it? What do you say?

Can Do Statements

- I can talk about appropriate behavior for jobs and work.
- I can talk about habits.
- I can agree and disagree tactfully.

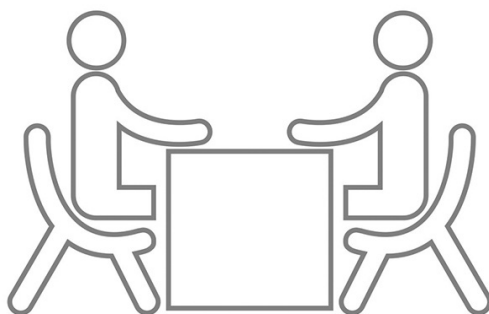

Let's Explore!

Janet and Miranda share their thoughts on Ferdinand ... but there's a disparity*.

* To "share" means you honestly express what's on your mind.

 A "disparity" is a difference between two or more things.

Instructions: Read the text aloud.

- Miranda: So, Janet. What did you think of our meeting with Ferdinand?
- Janet: He comes across pretty strong. Definitely charming. I'm not sure he's sincere.
- Miranda: I have to disagree. Clients trust him. He's credible. He was certainly animated yesterday, but he meant every word. When he's inspired, he can't help but show it. Not a bad thing.
- Janet: But he didn't care to show up on time. He thought the greenery on the mezzanine was a bigger priority.
- Miranda: I'm sorry, but I disagree. I think we have an example of a cultural disparity here. It wasn't the greenery that inspired Ferdinand. He makes a point of treating whomever he is with at the moment his priority. Because he prioritizes relationships, he would consider it important to be respectful to the concierge upon meeting. Of course, he does tend to be late, as you may imagine.
- Janet: The person at present is priority. I suppose that would be winsome with clients. Perhaps you can coach him on the priorities of time commitments and the colleagues or clients you keep waiting.
- Miranda: I agree. What would you think if I planned a presentation in cross-cultural relations and business etiquette? I think we could all benefit.
- Janet: What a good idea! I'll be there.

Let's Practice!

Learning Points

Talking about Habits

In the business world, it is important to talk about things that are part of your daily life. Normally, the Present Simple is used to describe activities you do on a daily basis. You can use the following expressions to describe habits.

Expression	Verb form
• comes across as ...	→ usually followed by an adjective
• can't help but ...	→ followed by 'verb'
• makes a point of ...	→ followed by '-ing'
• tends to ...	→ followed by 'verb'

Examples:

- He comes across as very self-confident.
- He can't help but be persistent.
- She makes a point of treating clients with respect.
- He tends to be punctual.

Agreeing and Disagreeing Tactfully

In English, when people give an opinion, it is important to show that you either agree or disagree with it.

There are many different ways in which we can show agreement and disagreement in English. Here are some of them:

Agreeing	Disagreeing
• I agree. • What a good idea. • I couldn't agree more. • I strongly agree. * • That's exactly how I feel. • Exactly. • Precisely. • You have a point there.	• I have to disagree. • I'm sorry, but I disagree. • But he didn't care to ... (+verb) • Absolutely not! • Do you really believe/think that (...)? • I don't agree at all. • I totally disagree.

* Apart from the phrases mentioned above, there are few important patterns with the word "agree". Study the following:

1. subject + agree + with + something / somebody.
→ I agree with you.

1. subject + agree + that + clause (subject + verb + object)
→ I agree that the meeting should be cancelled.

The pattern 'adverb + agree / disagree' is also commonly used. Here are the most common adverbs used with "agree" or "disagree".

• I strongly/completely/totally/absolutely disagree/agree.

Examples:

- I have to disagree that he might not be sincere.
- I agree that we should coach people on the priorities of time commitments.
