Let's Start!

Let's describe the kind of change we want to see!

Learning Outcome

Accurately use important information about people's jobs and places of work in communicative situations.

Can Do Statements

- I can talk about jobs and work.
- I can give oral instructions.
- I can talk about experiences I have had.

Ask your partner:

- Do you think it is easier to follow oral instructions or written instructions? Why?
- Can you think of a time when you had to follow oral instructions? What happened?

Let's Explore!

Miranda evaluates Peter's proposal. She talks about the company's assets

* An "asset" is a person or thing that is valuable or useful.

Instructions: Read the text aloud.

Peter: Miranda? Are you free now? You wanted to review my work before I left.

Miranda: Come in Peter. Have you made some good headway?

Peter: I think so. Your review of the meeting with Farmani certainly helped.

Miranda: Good. Let's see ... Hmmm ... you have a flair for presenting our company and its track record. I would want to do business with us after reading this!

Peter: Thank you. It's honest, of course.

Miranda: Yes. But you concentrate so much on our experience in North America. Remember that we are also aware of the challenges of moving into a new world market. Underscore our assets there. Janet and I have discussed moving Ferdinand into PR for this project. Mention him. He has extensive experience and knows the culture.

Peter: Ferdi Rosado? Of course he'd be great but he'd blow any budget. He's a spendthrift! Isn't Farmani rather conservative in his spending?

Miranda: It's covered Peter. He'll be paired with Rocco.

Peter: That'll depress him!

Miranda: None of your concern, Peter. We've thought it all through. Just work with what we gave you. Farmani needs to be aware that we've prepared for the cultural stage even though we don't have as many Latinos on our team as Garcia. Present him with a convincing package. I know you can do it.

Let's Practice!

Learning Points

Giving Oral Instructions

In the workplace, it is important to give instructions to other co-workers and employees. In order for you to give someone instructions for doing something, you need to use the imperative.

The imperative is the standard form to use. The understood pronoun is "you", but it is omitted. The imperative form is the same as the bare infinitive. It has the same form for both singular and plural.

Example:

- Mention him.
- Remember to write the report.

In the negative form, use "do not + verb" or the contracted form "don't + verb".

Example:

- Don't mention him.
- Don't forget to write the report.

The Imperative is used to:

1. Give instructions

- Work with what we have given you.

1. Give commands

- Underscore our strengths.

1. To make a polite request

- Please mention him.

Learning Points

Using the Present Perfect and the Simple Past Tense

You use the Present Perfect tense to show a connection between the past and the present.

The Present Perfect is used when the action happened at an indefinite time in the past. In this case, we often use already, ever, never, always, yet or just.

Examples:

I have already discussed this with Janet.

We have arrived at a decision.

Unlike the Present Perfect, the Simple Past refers to a specific event completed in the past.

Examples:

I finished writing the proposal.

I sent you it yesterday.
